

James Austin taught digital photography at the urban campus of Metro State College in Denver, Colorado, U.S.A. for years, in the industrial design department. Colorado University was his home for teaching night classes on Adobe Photoshop. His professional studio provided portraits for private clients. He taught Photoshop to pros, individually, in their private studios. Austin's landscape and nature work has shown in the Denver Art Museum, the Museum of Natural History in Washington D.C., and many Colorado galleries including The Photographer's Gallery in Cherry Creek.

On the web, Mr. Austin has been a writer for Apogee Photo Magazine since 2000. He is a frequent contributor to DeviantArt.com, Flickr.com, Pixiport.com and has his own website at <http://jimagesdigital.weebly.com/>. In print, he is the author of Haiku Photography and Sight Lines: Eyes and Ideas on Photography. He is an Adobe Certified Expert in Photoshop. His teaching style is to build on the visual strengths of each photographer, with room for humour and fun in the online classroom.

You can email Jim for more information about his Apogee classes at JimA@Jimages.com

Back to Instructors Page

Back to Our Classes Page

